Circuit Canada

From 1981 to 1997, Circuit Canada was a four-week series of international men's tournaments, comparable to the Futures events held today. Originally taking place in the summer months, Circuit Canada was moved to indoor clubs in the fall, before returning to the summer for 1995. Circuit Canada was part of the ITF Pro Circuit men's calendar.

NATIONAL BANK CUP

Outside of Rogers Cup presented by National Bank, the National Bank Cup is the only other ATP or WTA-sanctioned tennis event in Canada right now. It is currently classified as an International event on the WTA schedule and takes place on indoor hard courts at PEPS at the University of Laval in Quebec City. Created in 1993, it has been a success ever since, and was presented with the International Tournament of the Year Award by the WTA eight times, including every year from 1995-2000.

DAVIS CUP

DAVIS CUP RESULTS

Davis Cup by BNP Paribas began in 1900 as a competition between USA and Great Britain and is now the world's largest annual international team competition in sport with 126 countries participating in 2015. It is the international tennis team championship for men.

The competition was created in Boston in 1900 by four Harvard University students. One of them, Dwight Davis, designed the format of the tournament and ordered a trophy. That year, the USA deated the British Isles 3-0. In 1905, the tournament expanded to include France, Austria, Belgium, and Australasia and by the 1920s over 20 nations regularly participated.

From 1900 to 1971, the previous year's champion automatically received a spot in the final and was challenged by the winner of a knockout competition between the other countries. The format was changed in 1972 with all countries taking part in an elimination event.

In 1981, the current Davis Cup format featuring a 16-team World Group was created. This format sees the Top 16 countries in the world battle for the Davis Cup trophy while the other countries compete in three zonal groups – Americas, Europe/Africa, Asia/Oceania – in four separate tiers, Group I, Group II, Group III, and Group IV. For the countries not in the World Group, the aim each year is to be promoted to the next-highest tier.

Canada first began competing in Davis Cup in 1913, when it reached the semifinals. Its next best results until the 1990s was making the Americas Zone final in 1970 and 1982. In 1990, the Canadians won three consecutive ties for the first time in 78 years of Davis Cup competition to advance to the World Group for the first time. Canada remained in the World Group in 1991 and 1992 before returning to zonal competition for 11 years until briefly making another World Group appearance in 2004. The Canadian team then won three straight ties in 2011 to earn a spot in the 2012 World Group. Since then, Canada has been a regular member of the elite 16-team level and in 2013 the nation advanced to the World Group semifinals for the first time ever in a historic year. The 2016 season will be Canada's fifth straight in the World Group.

FED CUP

FED CUP RESULTS

Fed Cup by BNP Paribas (originally known as Federation Cup) was launched in 1963 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the International Tennis Federation and is now the world's largest annual international team competition in women's sport with 99 countries taking part in 2015. It is the international tennis team championship for women.

The original format saw Fed Cup played in a different venue each year over a one-week period. The first Fed Cup had 16 participating nations with USA emerging as the winner. A rise in the number of countries entering saw the addition of regional qualifying competitions in 1992, before Fed Cup adopted a similar format to Davis Cup in 1995. The current format, which sees the top eight nations comprise the World Group and the next eight countries make up World Group II, was instituted in 2005. The remaining nations are divided into regional zones – Americas, Europe/Africa, and Asia/Oceania – in three separate tiers, Group I, Group II, and Group III. The eight countries in the World Group compete for the Fed Cup title each year, while the other nations aim to advance into the next-highest level.

Canada has played Fed Cup since its inaugural year in 1963. The team reached the semifinals in 1988 and the quarter-finals in 1964, 1967, and 1987. Thanks to wins over Serbia and Slovakia in 2014, Canada was promoted to the highest level of Fed Cup play for 2015 and competed in the World Group for the first time ever. In 2016, they are back down in World Group II and will aim to advance into the highest level of Fed Cup play once again for 2017.

JUNIOR TENNIS

NATIONAL TRAINING CENTRES

In September 2007, Tennis Canada opened its doors to a full-time National Training Centre (NTC) for the first time. Under the leadership of world-renowned coach Louis Borfiga, who ran a similar program for the French Tennis Federation, identified talent aged 13-17 is provided with the training, coaching and resources necessary to succeed at the top levels of the sport. Operating national training centres is recognized as an international best practice where players can be regrouped in one location to hone their technical, physical and tactical fundamentals, garner top level international competitive experiences, manage life on the junior circuit as a precursor to the professional tours, and develop team identity and values to represent Canada on the international stage. The full-time program is run out of Uniprix Stadium in Montreal where there are 12 indoor hard courts, four indoor clay courts, state-of-the-art amenities, on-site physiotherapy and schooling.

In addition, three National Junior Training Programs (NJTP) have been created in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver to act as regrouping centres for promising U14 talent in those regions. The centres are supplementary training programs designed to support club leaders, personal coaches and parents to enrich the current training and competitive environment for top performing athletes. These three programs act as feeder systems into the full-time NTC.

ROGERS JUNIOR NATIONAL TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

Tennis Canada currently oversees eight junior national championships each year. Indoor championships are held in the spring while outdoor championships are held in the summer, with both being contested in four age categories – U12, U14, U16, and U18.

The outdoor championships date back to 1962 while the indoor championships first began in 1979 with the U18 age group. It expanded to U14 in 1985 and U16 in 1988. From 1995 to 1999, the U18 category was replaced with two international U18 events. The U12 category began in 2006 for both the outdoor and indoor events.

EXCELLENCE AWARDS

The Tennis Canada Excellence Awards were first presented in 1982 in recognition of outstanding contributions to Canadian tennis. The high performance awards honour outstanding male, female, junior, and wheelchair players. Excellence Awards are also presented each year in coaching, officiating, seniors tennis, and community tennis. The Tennis Canada Excellence Awards are selected by a committee comprised of high-ranking Tennis Canada personnel and the country's top national coaches.

CANADIAN TENNIS HALL OF FAME

Canadian Tennis
Hall of Fame

CANADIAN TENNIS HALL OF FAME

The Canadian Tennis Hall of Fame was created in 1991 to pay tribute to the outstanding contributors to the game in this country. The inaugural slate of inductees included players who were already members of the Canadian Sports Hall of Fame or the Canadian Amateur Sports Hall of Fame, and people who had a dramatic impact on Canadian tennis during a period of at least three decades. Inductees in the player category are chosen on the strength of their competitive records, with consideration given to sportsmanship and character. Builders are those who have made exceptional contributions to the development of tennis in Canada and may include coaches, officials, media and sponsors. Nominations for induction are presented for ratification by the Hall of Fame Nominating Committee.
